adobe audition training courses: Training of Trainers Program Ibrahim H. Hussney, Our movement reflects our attitudes or our character, and any change that occurs to them, and the pattern of our standing, sitting, or movement reflects a lot about what we plan to do. Body language is one of the reliable sources for collecting information regarding the characteristics, attitudes, and intentions of people. The language of the eyes is one of the most important languages of the body, as it conveys important messages about our competence and self-confidence as trainers, eyes are the window through which the human mind sees events, and visual contact is establishing communication between your eyes and the eyes of the person/people you talk to and interact with verbally, and more you develop visual contact better, you left a more positive impression of yourself, and you were able to build a better relationship with those you spoke to. Gesture is one of the elements of body language, and it is a form of non-verbal communication or non-voice communication in which visual physical movements work to deliver certain messages, either to replace or be associated with speech. Gestures include the movement of hands, faces, or other parts of the body, which allow individuals to communicate a variety of feelings and thoughts, such as approval, objection, gratitude ...etc. The tone of voice and pitch play a crucial role in supporting the trainer when presenting the program and communicating information to the trainees. In online sessions particularly, auditory communication is considered one of the sensitive matters that both the trainer and the trainee must pay close attention to it. The skill of deep listening is the ability to receive the message and interpret it accurately in the communication process and it is the main key to effective communication between the trainer and the trainees. Without the ability to listen well, the message to be delivered becomes incomprehensible and leads to stopping the communication process.

adobe audition training courses: Educational Technology and Narrative Brad Hokanson, Gregory Clinton, Karen Kaminski, 2017-12-09 This volume is the result of a 2016 research symposium sponsored by the Association for Educational Communications and Technology (AECT) focused on the growing theoretical areas of integrating story and narrative into educational design. Narrative, or storytelling, is often used as a means for understanding, conveying, and remembering the events of our lives. Our lives become a series of stories as we use narrative to structure our thinking; stories that teach, train, socialize, and create value. The contributions in this volume examine stories and narrative in instructional design and offer a diverse exploration of instructional design and learning environments. Among the topics discussed: The narrative imperative: creating a story telling culture in the classroom. Narrative qualities of design argumentation. Scenario-based workplace training as storytelling. Designing for adult learners' metacognitive development & narrative identity. Using activity theory in designing science inquiry games . Changing the narrative of school: toward a neurocognitive redefinition of learning. Educational Technology and Narrative is an invaluable resource offering application-ready ideas to students of instructional design, instructional design practitioners, and teachers seeking to utilize theories of story and narrative to the ways that they convey and express ideas of instructional design and educational technology.
